Emily Levy has worked in election protection since 2004, when she volunteered with the Election Protection Coalition in Albuquerque, NM. In the aftermath of that election, she coordinated Richard Hayes Phillips' precinct-level investigation into the irregularities in the presidential election in Ohio. Since then, she's worked on election security projects in her home state of California, as well as in Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Oregon, Nevada, New York, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Scrutineers Background

Scrutineers is a national, nonpartisan online community of people who care about the fairness and accuracy of US elections and are committed to doing what we can to protect the elections. We're dedicated to ending voter suppression and ensuring secure and transparent elections.

Scrutineers, a sponsored project of Netroots Foundation, a 501(c)3 organization, is training and mobilizing a U.S. election Fairness Force to make sure all voters can vote and that our votes are counted accurately. The freedom to vote is at the center of our work to achieve elections where every voice is heard.

Our vision is a nation where all voters and our votes are universally cherished as essential to ensuring that those elected to public office truly represent the honorable values and priorities of the people.

Millions of Americans are concerned about the security of our elections yet have no idea that there are actions they can take to help create transparent elections we all can trust. In our community, seasoned advocates share their expertise with newcomers, thereby equipping them to fan out to protect elections around the U.S. Our members learn the basics needed to become effective advocates for voting rights and election security.

We're voting rights activists, election security experts, and pollworkers. We're election officials, candidates and campaign volunteers. We're parents and grandparents, students and teachers. We're voters and we're those who aren't allowed to vote. We're people who believe that fair and accurate elections are essential to the future of our nation.
